53. The organizational and corporate structure of Plaintiff, including information concerning the persons responsible for the sales, marketing, conception, research, design, development, manufacture, and distribution of Plaintiff's automated storage systems and related components thereof;
54. The validity or invalidity of the patents-in-suit;
55. The conception and reduction to practice of the inventions claimed in the patents-in-suit, including without limitation, the circumstances under which each such invention was conceived and reduced to practice, the identities of all persons involved, the dates of each such conception and reduction to practice, any technical difficulties encountered in reducing the claimed inventions to practice, and all documents relating to each such conception and/or reduction to practice, including without limitation, inventors' notebooks;

56. The prosecution of the patents-in-suit and of patent applications (international or otherwise) filed anywhere in the world corresponding to the patents-in-suit, including without limitation, all facts relating to the prosecution, the identities of all persons involved, all prior art known to the inventors and/or the persons involved in the prosecution, and all documents relating to such prosecution;

57. For each of the patents-in-suit, sales, offers for sale, public uses, and public disclosures by Plaintiff, Plaintiff's licensees or others before the filing date of the patents-in-suit of any product incorporating any invention claimed in the patents-in-suit, including the dates of such activity, all facts relating to those activities, the identities of all persons involved, and all documents relating to such activity;

58. Exhibitions, displays, demonstrations, or discussions of Plaintiff's automated storage systems at trade shows, meetings or exhibitions, including but not limited to the times and places of any exhibition, display, demonstration or discussion with representatives of hospitals;

59. The design, development, manufacture, and operation of Plaintiff's automated storage systems, including but limited to finished products, prototypes and demonstration units, that include at least one claimed invention of the patents-in-suit, including any such products manufactured by others for Plaintiff, the dates of such design, development, manufacture, and operation, the identities of all persons involved, and all documents relating to such design, development, manufacture, and operation;

60. For each automated storage system sold by Plaintiff or its licensees, the efforts of Plaintiff and/or its licensees to mark the product with the patent numbers of the patents-in-suit, including without limitation, the time period during which such marked products were sold, and all documents relating to such marking;

61. The terms of license agreements and covenants not-to-sue (collectively “agreements”) under any of the patents-in-suit, and under any automated storage systems not covered by the patents-in-suit, including without limitation the royalty rates of such agreements, the revenue received by Plaintiff or the royalty paid by Plaintiff under such agreements, provisions requiring the licensee of such agreements to mark the patent number(s) of the patents-in-suit on automated storage systems, whether the agreements were exclusive or nonexclusive, and any applicable geographic and market restrictions;

62. Negotiations for license agreements and covenants not-to-sue under any of the patents-in-suit, and negotiations for agreements relating to automated storage systems, including communications and correspondence in connection with such negotiations;

63. Plaintiff’s policies and practices for licensing patents and other intellectual property, including without limitation, licenses for the right to make, use or sell any products incorporating inventions of the patents-in-suit, and whether any licenses have been granted under conditions to preserve exclusivity as to some aspect of the technology covered by the patents-in-suit;

64. The portion of the profit or selling price of automated storage systems that is customarily paid to Plaintiff in consideration for the right to manufacture, use or sell automated storage systems incorporating any invention claimed in the patents-in-suit, or products that compete with products that incorporate at least one claimed invention of the patents-in-suit;

65. Identities of all individuals who negotiated and evaluated licenses relating to the patents-in-suit;

66. Plaintiff's policies and practices regarding enforcing its patents against its competitors;

67. All efforts by or on behalf of Plaintiff to enforce the patents-in-suit, including without limitation all investigations of, and lawsuits regarding, automated storage systems alleged by Plaintiff to infringe the patents-in-suit;

68. Any evaluation or information gathered or considered by Plaintiff in deciding whether to accuse Defendants' products of infringement;

69. Defendants' products which Plaintiff asserts infringe the patents-in-suit;

70. Any evaluation or information gathered or considered by Plaintiff in deciding whether to accuse Defendants of willful infringement;

71. All litigations or threatened litigations relating to the patents-in-suit, including, without limitation, opinions of counsel, consent decrees, injunctions and settlement agreements, and any other forms of compensation received by Plaintiff in connection with any such litigations;

72. All litigations regarding automated storage systems in which Plaintiff was or is currently a plaintiff or defendant;

73. Any alleged infringers of any of the patents-in-suit, including without limitation, any settlement agreements and any other forms of compensation received by Plaintiff in connection with any of the patents-in-suit;

74. The acquisition of the patents-in-suit by Plaintiff;

75. The acquisition of Automated Healthcare, Inc. by Plaintiff;

76. Plaintiff's decision to sue Defendants, including, without limitation, all due diligence performed by Plaintiff or its counsel prior to commencing litigation against Defendants, and any analyses concerning Defendants' infringement of the patents-in-suit;

77. Plaintiff's testing, analysis and/or evaluation of any of Defendants' products, including but not limited to the facts, written notations and oral communications regarding any visits by Plaintiff to view any PillPick system;

78. Any comparisons made between the patents-in-suit and any of Defendants' products;

79. The earliest known use, sale or license, or offer for sale or license of any automated storage system by Plaintiff;

80. The ownership of each of the patents-in-suit;

81. The inventory and pricing of all of Plaintiff's automated storage systems;

82. Plaintiff's competitors or any other third party selling automated storage systems in the United States;

83. Business, strategic, financial or marketing plans, forecasts, analyses or reports relating to any automated storage systems sold by Plaintiff, and automated storage systems that compete with those sold by Plaintiff;

84. Plaintiff's revenues, gross profits, net profits and incremental/marginal profits, by product and quarter, from sales of automated storage systems, and from sales of automated storage systems sold by Plaintiff's competitors;

85. Plaintiff's share of any market for automated storage systems, by product and quarter;

86. The portion of Plaintiff's profits that are attributable to the patented inventions themselves as opposed to those profits attributable to features of Plaintiff's automated storage systems products unrelated to the patented inventions;

87. Plaintiff's policies, customs, business objectives and procedures relating to the manner in which it competes in any market for automated storage systems, including but not limited to the market for RobotRx;

88. Plaintiff's refusal or threatened refusal to deal with customers or potential customers who purchase automated storage systems from Defendants or others;

89. Plaintiff's efforts to curtail Defendants' ability to compete in any market for automated storage systems;

90. Communications, whether written or oral, between Plaintiff and any other party concerning or referring to any of the Defendants;

91. Plaintiff's pricing strategies, evaluations of competitors' prices, and determination of prices to charge for automated storage systems;

92. The advertisement, marketing and promotion of Plaintiff's Products;

93. Plaintiff's damages claims;

94. Plaintiff's profits, losses and sales of automated storage systems over the past eight years, and how those profits, losses and sales are reported to any parent company of Plaintiff;

95. The commercial success, if any, of the inventions claimed in the patents-in-suit, and the nexus between the commercial success and the merits of the inventions;

96. Market demand for products embodying the inventions claimed in the patents-in-suit;

97. Absence of acceptable non-infringing substitutes or alternatives to a product covered by the patents-in-suit;

98. Any attempts by others to design or build an automated storage system with the features of the inventions claimed in the patents-in-suit;

99. Any statements by anyone other than Plaintiff regarding whether an automated storage system disclosed in the patents-in-suit could be invented and/or reduced to practice;

100. Any long-felt need for the automated storage system disclosed in the patents-in-suit;

101. The differences between Plaintiff's products embodying the inventions claimed in the patents-in-suit and Plaintiff's automated storage systems that do not embody the patented inventions;

102. The utility and advantages of the patented inventions over the old modes or devices, if any, that had been used for achieving similar results;

103. The time, costs and efforts expended on researching, designing, developing and testing of each of the patented features of Plaintiff's automated storage systems, including but not limited to RobotRx;

104. Plaintiff's manufacturing and marketing capabilities;

105. The royalty rates in the automated storage systems industry or for similar or related technologies;

106. The effect of sales or licenses of the technology covered by the patents-in-suit on the sales of other products or technology sold or licensed by Plaintiff;

107. Plaintiff's damages theories, including, without limitation, its calculations of damages related to those theories;

108. To the extent not covered by the above, all facts supporting the allegations of paragraphs 8-21 of the Amended Complaint;

109. Identification of all persons with knowledge of the facts sought by this deposition notice; and

110. Identification of all documents relating to the facts sought by this deposition notice.
